

Public Media Forum

August 2, 2005, Pritchard Island Beach House, Seattle

What does the "public" in public broadcasting mean? What range of opinions should find a home on PBS and NPR, and how should programming decisions be kept accountable (and to whom)? How should stations respond to accusations of liberal bias in public broadcasting? Reclaim the Media hosted this public discussion featuring Ross Reynolds (Host, "The Conversation," KUOW), Ann Suter (Executive Director, SCAN), Robert Jefferson (Program Director, KBCS) and Randy Brinson (Program Director, KCTS), on the challenges facing public broadcasting today, and the relationship between public and community broadcasting.

